Empathy Map

Create an empathy map to understand your customer/user from four perspectives - what they Say, Think, Do, and Feel - in relation to the problem your project addresses. This helps the team build a customer-centric solution.

SAYS

- "I spend hours scrolling through blogs, Reddit, and Instagram, but I still don't have a concrete daily schedule."
- "I want an authentic trip tailored to my vibe—good food, culture, and scenic sunsets—not generic tourist traps."
- "Can someone give me an itinerary that groups nearby places together so I don't waste half my day in traffic?"
- "I want the flexibility to switch my plan to 'chill mode' if I feel tired without ruining the whole day's bookings."

THINKS

- "Standard package tours feel too commercial and rigid; they don't understand my personal travel style."
- "Will I end up overspending on unexpected transit and entrance fees if I don't budget accurately in advance?"
- "There has to be an intelligent AI tool that can plan a realistic, day-by-day trip in 2 minutes instead of 2 weeks."
- "I worry I'll miss out on hidden local spots simply because I didn't have enough time to research."

DOES

- Keeps 20+ browser tabs open comparing Google Maps, TripAdvisor, travel blogs, and YouTube vlogs.
- Manually plots attractions onto Google Maps to check distances and avoid backtracking across the city.
- Copies and pastes disjointed activity notes, timings, and ticket links into notes apps or Excel sheets.
- Searches frantically on their phone for "best cafes and sunset spots near me" once they arrive.

FEELS

- Overwhelmed & Exhausted: Mentally drained by information overload and contradictory travel advice.
- Anxious & Stressed: Worried about poor time management, backtracking, or exceeding their daily budget.
- Excited & Inspired: Thrilled at the prospect of exploring unique destinations aligned with their personal vibe.
- Relieved & Confident: Craves the peace of mind that comes with a streamlined, geographically optimized itinerary synced directly to their mobile calendar.
